Carlyle Teague

Carlyle Teague retired as President of the Cooperative Council of North Carolina after serving over 26 years in that capacity. Teague graduated from N. C. State University in 1958 and worked for School Pictures, Inc., traveling to public schools throughout North Carolina for seven years. He continues to use his 55488 photography skills as the official photographer of the N.C. General Assembly and has been a wedding photographer for over thirty years.

Teague has worked in the agricultural industry in various capacities. At one time he worked closely with Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham writing his speeches and traveling with him throughout the state. He has served on many agricultural and civic committees. Currently, he serves as Executive Director of N.C. Specialty Foods Association.
